

cus throw. His closest rival Whitney of Dartmouth. Philbrook put the 16-pound shot 44 feet and threw the discus 125 feet 5½ inches.

THE LEADER OF BAHAIST MOVEMENT IS IN TOWN

One of the kindest, most lovable men in the world is in Chicago today.

He is Abdul Baha, leader of the Bahaist movement.

Bahaism has been called an Oriental cult, a new religion. It is neither one nor the other. It is merely Abdul Baha. And Abdul Baha is a man who loves his fellow men, and who carries his love for them into every word he utters, into his every deed.

Bahaism is just the practice of universal kindness, universal brotherhood, universal love.

Abdul Baha is an old man now. He has many followers, and is accorded great respect by them. His paths are not hard.

But it was different in his youth. When first he began to preach his doctrine of love and forgiveness in his native Persia, he was persecuted.

The Mohammedans of his native land hated him. How could they, worshippers of the sword as they are, do otherwise?

He was driven from city to city, from village to village. There were times when he had not food to eat, when he had not a place to lay his head.

He was driven from his native land. He took refuge in Stam-boul, and there again felt the lash of persecution.

Yet he never spoke bitterly of his enemies, never denounced them, never cursed them. He went his simple, kindly way, saying they knew not what they did.

Abdul Baha arrived in Chicago this forenoon. A limousine was waiting him, and he was whirled to the Plaza hotel, where he has been closeted in his room all day, resting after his journey from Washington.

HUMORIST

Patient—I've got stomach trouble.

Doctor—Why don't you diet?

Patient—What color?

"No Wonder."

An officer was showing the old woman over the battle ship. "This," said he, pointing to an inscribed plate on the deck, "is where our gallant captain fell."

"No wonder," replied the old woman; "I nearly slipped on it myself."